On all roads peasants' carts and other vehicles loaded with household goods are moving north and east of the rear of the old battle line. The returning ones plod on behind their carts silently, apparently unwilling to rejoice before they had seen their villages and knew their homes were intact.

Young men and middle-aged menwere on the roads but they were moving toward the south. Being of military age the men were going to join the Beigian army. They had escaped deportation by hiding in cellars and elsewhere when the Germans departed.

The population does not supear to have suffered physically during the German occupation. The women and children seem healthy and many declared they had suffered no actual privation.

Austria's armies, shattered by the blows of the Italians, British and French, are fleeing pell mell on a front of more than 100 miles, from the Brenta river east and south to the Adriatic. Apparently the enemy has lost all power of resistance on the important sectors of the front. Countless numbers of prisoners are being taken by the allies. Field Marshal Haig has again taken up offensive operations south of Valenciennes, and reports his troops making good progress. On the French front and on the American sectors east and west of the Meuse, only the artillery has been active.

East of the Plave all the allied armies are marching rapidly toward the Tagliamento in pursuit of the Austrians. The Livenza river, 15 miles east of the Plave, and 18 miles from the Tagliamento, has been reached and crossed, while to the south along the lowlands north of the Adriatic, the Italian Third army continues to move ahead.

The formidable enemy defense bastion around Monte Grappa has been broken by the allies, and the Austrians are retiring hurriedly from the region between the Brenta and Plave. Northeast of Monte Grappa the Italians have forced their way through the Quero gorge and are moving up the Plave valley toward Belluno, further enlarging the wedge between the Austrian armies in Venetia and those in the mountains.
